50th ANNIVERSARY OF TENNESSEE SIT-INS

An intimate look at the role Tennessee students played in shaping the modern Civil Rights Movement is explored in We Shall Not Be Moved: The 50th Anniversary of Tennessee’s Civil Rights Sit-Ins - an exhibit featured at the university’s J. Houston Gordon Museum.

The exhibit, on display from Feb. 1 – March 14, features artifacts, photographic images, and audio-visual media related to the nonviolent direct-action campaign to end racial segregation at lunch counters in downtown Nashville which occurred from Feb. 13 to May 10, 1960.

Fifty years ago, a handful of Nashville college students from Fisk University, Tennessee A&I (later Tennessee State) and American Baptist Theological Seminary, along with religious leaders Kelly Miller Smith and James Lawson, began sit-in campaigns which sparked the formation of a mass sit-in movement throughout Tennessee and the rest of the South.

The exhibit, produced by the Tennessee State Museum, includes historical signage, a letter from a sit-in participant describing a protest, biographical posters, original news footage taken in Nashville during 1960, and other items related to the sit-ins.

The museum, located in UT Martin’s Paul Meek Library, is open to the public Monday-Friday, from 8 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. For more information, call ext. 7094 on campus.

Exhibit commemorates 50th anniversary of Civil Rights sit-ins

Academic speaker program to host Eckert

Dr. Carol Eckert will be the next guest academic speaker at 7:30 p.m., Feb. 5, at the Watkins Auditorium in the Boling University Center.

The title of Eckert’s speech is “Applied Research: Pursuing the Art of Teaching Art.”

Eckert, a professor of art at UT Martin, teaches all of the university’s art history and several art education courses. She earned her BFA in sculpture from Austin Peay State University and a master’s in art history from Vanderbilt University. She earned her doctorate in art education from the Union Institute and University.

Before coming to UT Martin, Eckert taught at Austin Peay State University and ran a private art studio for 10 years. She received the Higher Education Division Educator of the Year Award for 2005 and for 2013 from the Tennessee Art Education Association.

She was recognized by the UT Martin College of Humanities and Fine Arts as the Outstanding Junior Faculty Member of the Year for 2005.

In 2010, Eckert published a text/workbook for introductory

Please see Eckert, Page 2
UT Martin photographer Nathan Morgan took first places for a sports photo and his design of a lifestyle page in the Kentucky Press Association Excellence in Newspaper contest, Jan. 25, in Lexington, Ky. He also received second for his work on a graphic. Morgan also was part of the Bowling Green Daily News’ photography staff, who won Newspaper of the Year in the Kentucky News Photographer Association’s annual Pictures of the Year contest. The Daily News’ photo staff beat the Lexington Herald-Leader and The (Louisville) Courier-Journal for top honors.

Lane Last, professor of art, has work included in an exhibit titled “Ossuary” at the Herron Gallery of IUPUI in Indianapolis, Ind. The show is being curated by professor Laurie Beth Clark of the University of Wisconsin. The show will be open to the public through Feb. 15.

Dr. Sean Walker, assistant professor of management, was informed his research report titled “Priming Power to Influence Perceptions of Ethics” will be published in the January edition of The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives.

Academic Speaker -- Dr. Peter Mahaffey from King’s University in Edmonton, Canada, was on the UT Martin campus Jan. 22-23 for events sponsored by the Honors Programs and the Student Members of the American Chemical Society (SMACS). Mahaffey interacted extensively with several members of the faculty and students. Besides his major address on the topic of Climate Science, Powering Our Planet and Rare Materials: A Role for Visualization, he made an informal presentation to SMACS and to Dr. Airee’s Green Chemistry and the Environment class. Following this presentation, he donned the SMACS T-shirt and posed for a photo with several members of the audience: (from left) Sarah Maxey, Stephanie Gourley, Chapell Smith, Krysten Harris, Brianna Foss, Matthew Roberson, Amber Taylor, Eric Fussell, Mahaffy, Jacob Thompson, Dr. Phillip Davis, Destin Pouche’, Songyuan Lu, Jonathan Chlarson, Drake Williams and Dr. S. K. Airee.

YoUTM

UT Martin photographer Nathan Morgan took first places for a sports photo and his design of a lifestyle page in the Kentucky Press Association Excellence in Newspaper contest, Jan. 25, in Lexington, Ky. He also received second for his work on a graphic. Morgan also was part of the Bowling Green Daily News’ photography staff, who won Newspaper of the Year in the Kentucky News Photographer Association’s annual Pictures of the Year contest. The Daily News’ photo staff beat the Lexington Herald-Leader and The (Louisville) Courier-Journal for top honors.

Lane Last, professor of art, has work included in an exhibit titled “Ossuary” at the Herron Gallery of IUPUI in Indianapolis, Ind. The show is being curated by professor Laurie Beth Clark of the University of Wisconsin. The show will be open to the public through Feb. 15.

Dr. Sean Walker, assistant professor of management, was informed his research report titled “Priming Power to Influence Perceptions of Ethics” will be published in the January edition of The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives.

Academic Speaker -- Dr. Peter Mahaffey from King’s University in Edmonton, Canada, was on the UT Martin campus Jan. 22-23 for events sponsored by the Honors Programs and the Student Members of the American Chemical Society (SMACS). Mahaffey interacted extensively with several members of the faculty and students. Besides his major address on the topic of Climate Science, Powering Our Planet and Rare Materials: A Role for Visualization, he made an informal presentation to SMACS and to Dr. Airee’s Green Chemistry and the Environment class. Following this presentation, he donned the SMACS T-shirt and posed for a photo with several members of the audience: (from left) Sarah Maxey, Stephanie Gourley, Chapell Smith, Krysten Harris, Brianna Foss, Matthew Roberson, Amber Taylor, Eric Fussell, Mahaffy, Jacob Thompson, Dr. Phillip Davis, Destin Pouche’, Songyuan Lu, Jonathan Chlarson, Drake Williams and Dr. S. K. Airee.

YoUTM

UT Martin photographer Nathan Morgan took first places for a sports photo and his design of a lifestyle page in the Kentucky Press Association Excellence in Newspaper contest, Jan. 25, in Lexington, Ky. He also received second for his work on a graphic. Morgan also was part of the Bowling Green Daily News’ photography staff, who won Newspaper of the Year in the Kentucky News Photographer Association’s annual Pictures of the Year contest. The Daily News’ photo staff beat the Lexington Herald-Leader and The (Louisville) Courier-Journal for top honors.

Lane Last, professor of art, has work included in an exhibit titled “Ossuary” at the Herron Gallery of IUPUI in Indianapolis, Ind. The show is being curated by professor Laurie Beth Clark of the University of Wisconsin. The show will be open to the public through Feb. 15.

Dr. Sean Walker, assistant professor of management, was informed his research report titled “Priming Power to Influence Perceptions of Ethics” will be published in the January edition of The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives.

Academic Speaker -- Dr. Peter Mahaffey from King’s University in Edmonton, Canada, was on the UT Martin campus Jan. 22-23 for events sponsored by the Honors Programs and the Student Members of the American Chemical Society (SMACS). Mahaffey interacted extensively with several members of the faculty and students. Besides his major address on the topic of Climate Science, Powering Our Planet and Rare Materials: A Role for Visualization, he made an informal presentation to SMACS and to Dr. Airee’s Green Chemistry and the Environment class. Following this presentation, he donned the SMACS T-shirt and posed for a photo with several members of the audience: (from left) Sarah Maxey, Stephanie Gourley, Chapell Smith, Krysten Harris, Brianna Foss, Matthew Roberson, Amber Taylor, Eric Fussell, Mahaffy, Jacob Thompson, Dr. Phillip Davis, Destin Pouche’, Songyuan Lu, Jonathan Chlarson, Drake Williams and Dr. S. K. Airee.

YoUTM

UT Martin photographer Nathan Morgan took first places for a sports photo and his design of a lifestyle page in the Kentucky Press Association Excellence in Newspaper contest, Jan. 25, in Lexington, Ky. He also received second for his work on a graphic. Morgan also was part of the Bowling Green Daily News’ photography staff, who won Newspaper of the Year in the Kentucky News Photographer Association’s annual Pictures of the Year contest. The Daily News’ photo staff beat the Lexington Herald-Leader and The (Louisville) Courier-Journal for top honors.

Lane Last, professor of art, has work included in an exhibit titled “Ossuary” at the Herron Gallery of IUPUI in Indianapolis, Ind. The show is being curated by professor Laurie Beth Clark of the University of Wisconsin. The show will be open to the public through Feb. 15.

Dr. Sean Walker, assistant professor of management, was informed his research report titled “Priming Power to Influence Perceptions of Ethics” will be published in the January edition of The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives.

Academic Speaker -- Dr. Peter Mahaffey from King’s University in Edmonton, Canada, was on the UT Martin campus Jan. 22-23 for events sponsored by the Honors Programs and the Student Members of the American Chemical Society (SMACS). Mahaffey interacted extensively with several members of the faculty and students. Besides his major address on the topic of Climate Science, Powering Our Planet and Rare Materials: A Role for Visualization, he made an informal presentation to SMACS and to Dr. Airee’s Green Chemistry and the Environment class. Following this presentation, he donned the SMACS T-shirt and posed for a photo with several members of the audience: (from left) Sarah Maxey, Stephanie Gourley, Chapell Smith, Krysten Harris, Brianna Foss, Matthew Roberson, Amber Taylor, Eric Fussell, Mahaffy, Jacob Thompson, Dr. Phillip Davis, Destin Pouche’, Songyuan Lu, Jonathan Chlarson, Drake Williams and Dr. S. K. Airee.

YoUTM

UT Martin photographer Nathan Morgan took first places for a sports photo and his design of a lifestyle page in the Kentucky Press Association Excellence in Newspaper contest, Jan. 25, in Lexington, Ky. He also received second for his work on a graphic. Morgan also was part of the Bowling Green Daily News’ photography staff, who won Newspaper of the Year in the Kentucky News Photographer Association’s annual Pictures of the Year contest. The Daily News’ photo staff beat the Lexington Herald-Leader and The (Louisville) Courier-Journal for top honors.

Lane Last, professor of art, has work included in an exhibit titled “Ossuary” at the Herron Gallery of IUPUI in Indianapolis, Ind. The show is being curated by professor Laurie Beth Clark of the University of Wisconsin. The show will be open to the public through Feb. 15.

Dr. Sean Walker, assistant professor of management, was informed his research report titled “Priming Power to Influence Perceptions of Ethics” will be published in the January edition of The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives.